(#31-40) Read the following passages and choose the one best answer for each question. (3 points for each question)

Questions 31-34 are based on the following passage.

Nature challenges humans in many ways, through disease, weather, and famine. For those living along the coast, one unusual phenomenon capable of catastrophic destruction is the tsunami. A tsunami is a series of waves generated in a body of water by an impulsive disturbance. Earthquakes, landslides, volcanic eruptions, explosions, and even the impact of meteorites can generate tsunamis. Starting at sea, a tsunami slowly approaches land, growing in height and losing energy through bottom friction and turbulence. Still, just like any other water waves, tsunamis unleash tremendous energy as they plunge onto the shore. They have great erosion potential, stripping beaches of sand, undermining trees, and flooding hundreds of meters inland. They can easily crush cars, homes, vegetation, and anything they collide with. To minimize the devastation of a tsunami, scientists are constantly trying to anticipate them more accurately and more quickly. Because many factors come together to produce a life-threatening tsunami, foreseeing them is not easy. (A) this, researchers in meteorology persevere in studying and predicting tsunami behavior.

31. In the first sentence, why does the author mention weather?
(1) because tsunamis are caused by bad weather
(2) because tsunamis are more destructive than weather phenomena
(3) as an example of a destructive natural force
(4) as an introduction to the topic of coastal storms

32. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the underlined word unleash?
(1) release (2) consume
(3) contain (4) sustain

33. Which of the following is most appropriate for blank (A)?
(1) In line with (2) Despite
(3) Contrary to (4) Compared with

34. Which sentence best expresses the essential information of this passage?
(1) Tsunamis could become a new source of usable energy in the near future.
(2) Tsunamis do more damage to the land than flooding.
(3) Tsunamis can have an especially catastrophic impact on coastal communities.
(4) Scientists can predict and track tsunamis with a fair degree of accuracy, reducing their potential impact.

Questions 35-37 are based on the following passage.

Most of the electricity in the United States is produced in steam turbines. There are many discrete steps in this process. In a steam turbine, combustion of coal, petroleum, or natural gas heats water to make steam. The steam rotates a shaft that is connected to a generator that produces electricity. Finally, that electricity is converted by a transformer and conveyed from the turbine to its place of use. Many sources can provide energy to heat the water in a steam turbine. Coal is a ___(A)___ source, producing 51 percent of the country's electricity. Another common way to heat water for steam turbines is through nuclear power. In nuclear fission, atoms of uranium fuel are hit by neutrons, triggering a continuous chain of fission that releases heat. In 2001, nuclear power generated 21 percent of the electricity in the United States. Solar power meets less than 1 percent of the United States' electricity needs, because it is not regularly available and harnessing it is more expensive than using fossil fuels. Dependence on electricity permeates daily life in the United States. Still, few people are aware of the many components of electricity production.

35. Which of the following is most appropriate for blank (A)?
(1) cost-effective (2) demanding
(3) primary (4) manageable

36. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the underlined word permeates?
(1) pesters (2) peruses
(3) perjures (4) pervades

37. What does the author say about solar power?
(1) It produces more electricity than any other source.
(2) It is a relatively small source of electricity in the United States.
(3) Electricity producers are trying to use it more regularly.
(4) Researchers are trying to make it cheaper to use.

Questions 38-40 are based on the following passage.

I still believe, many years after coming to Johnson University from my native Canada, that teaching is a noble calling and that professors are obligated to serve their students. Yet, no professor can be all things to all students, so one must be prepared to temper one's aspirations with practicality. For me, this balancing act has led me to focus my working life primarily on assisting my students in the development of their English as a foreign language speaking and listening skills by endeavoring to be an effective classroom teacher and a useful researcher. In the classroom, I understand the importance of motivating learners to exceed their English language limits without setting unreasonable goals for them to achieve. If I were to abandon reason and set impractical learning goals, the result would likely be failure, which would in turn negatively impact motivation. So I have sought to invoke passion in my students for learning while at the same time being practical about the expectations that I have for them.

38. According to the passage, which is NOT true?
(1) The writer has a singular aim with regard to students.
(2) Professors cannot meet every student's needs.
(3) The writer has tried to increase students' enthusiasm for learning English.
(4) Failure decreases motivation.

39. Which of the following words is closest in meaning to the underlined word temper?
(1) abandon (2) examine
(3) confound (4) moderate

40. Which of the following is the most appropriate title for this passage?
(1) Balance in an Academic Context
(2) Practicality is the Key to Effective Instruction
(3) Teaching Is a Noble Profession
(4) Daily Life at Johnson University
