(#31-40) Read the following passages and choose the one best answer for each question. (3 points for each question)

Question 31 is based on the following passage.

Until the late 19th century, police had no formal system of identifying those who had previously been convicted of crimes. Simply by using an alias, a criminal could hide the fact that he was a repeat offender. To solve this problem, French researcher Alphonse Bertillon devised a scheme based on photographic portraits, or "mugshots," and comprehensive physical descriptions. When a person was arrested, police would obtain detailed physical measurements, note distinctive physical features, and take carefully arranged photographs. The resulting material would be filed away and then used to establish the identities of those involved in later cases. Although police today have a far greater range of tools at their disposal, they remain indebted to Bertillon for his efforts to _____(A)_____.

31. Which of the following is most appropriate for blank (A)?
(1) improve on earlier systematic methods
(2) identify those wrongly convicted of crimes
(3) refine the process of crime scene investigation
(4) create a standard method of cataloguing criminals

Question 32 is based on the following passage.

When toddlers play, they often want a parent to participate. Such requests are opportunities for parents to bond with their children while fostering social, emotional, and cognitive development. However, parents should resist the urge to respond affirmatively to every invitation to engage in play. Many of the benefits of play are derived from exploring activities independently. When parents constantly intervene, their children lose an important opportunity to harness their creativity and develop self-reliance. Overall, then, parents should do their best to _____(A)_____.

32. Which of the following is most appropriate for blank (A)?
(1) include different forms of creative play
(2) supervise their children's activities carefully
(3) allow their children to direct them during play
(4) strike a balance in terms of taking part in play

Questions 33-36 are based on the following passage.

The American pilot Charles Lindbergh is best known for making the first nonstop solo flight across the Atlantic Ocean. He used the financial backing of several prominent investors in his hometown of St. Louis, Missouri, to pay the Ryan Airline Company in San Diego to construct his iconic plane, the Spirit of St. Louis.

When the plane was complete, it was brought to Lindbergh's departure point of Long Island, New York. After being delayed for several days in Long Island due to inclement weather, Lindbergh finally took off on May 20, 1927. The "great circle" route that he had charted would take him along the coast of Newfoundland, Canada, and then over the Atlantic Ocean and Ireland, before ending in Paris, France.

His altitude ranged from merely a few feet above sea level during the day to over 10,000 feet at night. According to Lindbergh, he spent much of the flight struggling to see. He was forced to contend with thick fog and clouds. _____(A)_____, the plane's front window area had been replaced with a gasoline tank to minimize weight, leaving him reliant on a mirrored instrument on the side of his plane to see ahead. Fortunately, in the late evening of May 21, 1927, he landed safely in Paris, 33.5 hours after takeoff.

33. Where did Lindbergh take off from for his historic flight?
(1) Paris (2) St. Louis
(3) New York (4) San Diego

34. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the underlined word charted?
(1) tracked (2) planned
(3) detected (4) ranked

35. Which of the following is correct about Charles Lindbergh?
(1) His trip included brief stops in Newfoundland and Ireland.
(2) He departed a day earlier in order to avoid poor weather.
(3) He flew at high altitudes only during the daytime.
(4) His forward view was blocked by a fuel tank.

(3) Moreover (4) In conclusion

Questions 37-40 are based on the following passage.

When the Maya empire fell to the Spanish in the 16th century, numerous documents written in the Maya script were destroyed. In addition, Mayans were forced to learn the Latin alphabet and to speak only in Spanish. As a result, the script that the Mayans had used prior to invasion eventually became impenetrable.

The first to try to decode the Maya script were the conquistadors themselves. One of their number, Diego de Landa, described the script as an alphabet, having assumed that its symbols were analogous to the phonetic symbols of the Latin alphabet. By the 20th century, however, the ___(A)___ view was that the script was a pictographic system—that is, each of its symbols stood not for a single sound but for a whole word or idea.

Then, in the 1950s, a Russian linguist named Yuri Knorozov chanced upon a replica of a Mayan text. Approaching the symbols with a fresh pair of eyes, Knorozov concluded that there were too few to form a pictographic system but too many to form an alphabet. Instead, he realized, each of them represented a syllable, or a compound of vowels and consonants. While Knorozov's research met with resistance at first, it eventually came to be recognized as a pivotal contribution to the understanding of the script.

37. What is the main topic of the passage?

(1) The unique complexities of the Maya script
(2) The attempts to decipher the Maya script
(3) The linguistic origins of the Maya script
(4) The cultural influence of the Maya script

38. Which of the following is closest in meaning to the underlined word impenetrable?

(1) unsubstantial (2) imperative
(3) inaccessible (4) unacceptable

39. What did Knorozov propose about the Maya symbols?

(1) They were syllabic.
(2) They were alphabetic.
(3) They were pictographic.
(4) They were non-phonetic.

40. Which of the following is most appropriate for blank (A)?

(1) comprehensive (2) arbitrary
(3) prevailing (4) exceptional
